In this model I have 2 collections for reviews and critics, but since they are so similar, I think it's better to place them both in the same collection. Thus my model only has reviews and critics, but instead of 2 models, I would have 4 models. The question is, since I didn't find anything about this scenario in the backbone reference, does it make sense at all? It seems weird not to have 2 separate models for reviews and critics. A: Check out the Collection Model. Models themselves don't have their own Collections, but you can pass them around as models all day. The only consideration would be what makes sense for you in the context of your application. There are, however, multiple patterns that would apply to your specific scenario. Chinese $1.3 Million Pendant by Z Bridal Xu Xiaohong at Z Bridal has created a beautiful ring of 14 round green stone Chinese icons in the shape of lotus flowers. The piece is titled "Lotus" and now floats delicately from the 1.3 million individual green stones and is a new Yixing vessel series that features an intricate floral motif pattern on the surface. Here's a peek at the nearly 1 million pieces that will be made in total. The final piece is cast in 18 karat white gold and has polished edges and a delicate setting. The piece is available now at the following locations: This entry was posted on Wednesday, April 26th, 2017
